CABA ANNOUNCES NEW MEMBERSHIP CATEGORIES TO EXPAND ITS REACH

November 15, 2001

The Continental Automated Buildings Association announced today that their Board of Directors has approved three new membership categories. As North America's only industry association for stakeholders involved in integrated systems, the automation of buildings and homes and the technologies required therein, CABA will now make available to a much wider group of industry participants at affordable rates. In addition to CABA's sponsor and regular membership categories, the following new categories were created:

Associate: $295 annual membership investment. This category is applicable to the following industry categories: Architects Builders/Developers Contractors Distributors Engineering Firms Installing Dealers Interior Design Property Managers Publishers Wholesalers

This membership category would allow all member companies hardcopy and online access to CABA resources.

Educational Affiliate: $1000 annual membership investment. This category is available to colleges, universities and trade schools. As Affiliate members, these schools' faculty and students can take advantage of CABA's extensive and searchable online resources. If requested, hard copy reports would be furnished to a centralized library for cataloging. This Program would also allow CABA's Educational Affiliates to use certain CABA publications (with prior approval of CABA) as part of their curriculum.

Student: $100 annual membership investment. This category covers individual post-secondary and graduate students involved/interested in home & building automation and integrated systems. Access to CABA's informational resources will be available at CABA's searchable online Members Lounge.
