AT&T Appointed to CABA Board of Directors

August 20, 2015

The Continental Automated Buildings Association (CABA) welcomes AT&T* to the CABA Board of Directors. CABA is a non-profit industry association that provides information, education, and networking to help promote advanced technologies for the automation of homes and buildings.

AT&T provides leading entertainment, mobile, high speed Internet and voice services to millions in the United States and around the world.

“CABA is extremely excited to welcome AT&T to its Board of Directors,” said Ronald J. Zimmer, CABA President & CEO. “AT&T is a multinational company with a storied history, and will make a great addition to our organization.”

The company will be represented on the CABA Board by Matthew Beattie, who is executive director of AT&T's Fiber to the Building Program. The program is a part of the company's multi-year high-speed Internet transformation effort. In his position, Beattie coordinates the marketing, sales and network build of fiber optic services to these business properties. The program has seen the placement of fiber to thousands of properties and delivers a broad portfolio of telecommunication services to tenants.

“CABA has an excellent history of industry leadership and helping global companies advance,” said Beattie. “We're looking forward to evaluating and conveying trends through advancing applications, technology and integrated systems in the home and building automation sectors with this community.”
